NuHealth² offers an innovative communication space in which leading healthcare experts from around the world can formulate, propose, discuss and agree the changes necessary, in given settings, to best align healthcare delivery with healthcare needs and expectations in the 21st century.

No matter the field, whether the management of chronic diseases or dementia, the rise of infectious diseases, antibiotic resistance, or the role of diagnostics and genetic testing for disease prevention, NuHealth² will bring the most experienced and relevant clinicians and scientists together.

Common values that apply to all our conferences, workshops and discussion groups are: independence from both government and industry, openness and transparency, and a systems and personalised medicine approach.

NuHealth² was established in 2014 following the recognition of the urgent need for such a forum by two non-profit organisations:

The Conference features a world-class line up of speakers bringing their expertise to bear on topics ranging from lifestyle medicine, through political support for innovation, to compassion in healthcare.

All presentations and Q&A sessions will focus on challenges and opportunities presently facing the NHS given spiralling rates of chronic disease and an ageing population.

For the evening summit, our speakers will be joined by a select group of about forty healthcare specialists from the NHS, the charity sector and politics. The discussions will be led by Dr Vivienne Lyfar-Cissé.

The summit will facilitate the creation of a broad 'UK Charter for Healthcare Renewal and Sustainability', to be developed jointly by the international panel of speakers and key figures from UK healthcare and politics.

The Charter will draw out by consensus the fundamental elements required for a sustainable healthcare system that remains true to the NHS Constitution and the healthcare needs of UK citizens. The Charter, in its final form, aims to provide both a basis for the ongoing renewal of the NHS, but also a platform for debate among healthcare professionals, health authorities, politicians and the public.
